

Philosophy of Sciensiism* by Joseph D. Smith

Joseph D. Smith, autistic philosopher and author founded his own philosophy, which believes that hot and cold, slow and fast, all of which are polar opposites that exist simultaneously, are the only things that can exist! If some things don't exist simultaneously with each other, such as the beginning of the Universe and the ending of the Universe, then they don't exist. Hot and cold are actually the same principle, rather than separate, because they are more like a spectrum of substance.

This philosophy is called Sciensiism, a term that Joseph D. Smith coined to mean the science of the totality of all of reality. When one thing exists, it's polar opposite must exist at the same time. How can the beginning of the Universe exist at the same time as the ending of it? Everything happens as polar opposites, so how can we assert that something will exist?
